Welcome to the Central Carolina Community College 2017-2018 Ambassadors Blog

Yeida M. Casais & Erin Walker

As of now, the Ambassadors continue to volunteer at the New Student Orientations on the Lee, Harnett and Chatham campuses. While also wrapping up our Summer Leadership Training course, which has been taught by Mr. Aaron Mabe. We are also assisting the Admissions Office with implementation of the Quality Enhancement Plan (QEP)/My Academic Pathway (MAP). The goal of this initiative is to find students' interests and help them make appropriate career choices earlier in their educational journey. For more information on this topic please visit: http://www.cccc.edu/qep/.

Throughout this whole process, we have been fortunate to meet some of the wonderful faculty and staff members that help keep CCCC running, while becoming more informed about the college. For instance, did you know that Wilkinson Hall was the first building built for CCCC back in the 1960's? Were you aware that CCCC participates in Title IX; Dean Willett is the Title IX Coordinator, and that you can look at CCCC's Annual Security Reports on the cccc.edu website?

As a group, we have many community service passions and plan to participate together in each ambassadors' area of interest. By doing so, we are getting to know each other better, while proudly representing CCCC. This month, we completed our group service learning activity at the Fisher House on Fort Bragg. The Fisher House is a place where families can stay at no cost while loved ones are receiving treatment on base.

The Foundation Board had their quarterly meeting at the Civic Center this month and we were lucky enough to sit and talk, over a meal, with the individuals who have made our positions possible. We are extremely honored to have received our scholarships from the Foundation, which has provided us with the opportunity to take steps towards our dreams and goals.

As Ambassadors we continue to grow and learn as a team and look forward to this upcoming school year!
